LE Review Comm.,

The attached document was commissioned by the Justice Dept. some years back and should be helpful in understanding the current issues in policing.

Wayne Stinson

Excerpts:

"Accountability is a vital element of American policing. Both individual officers and law enforcement agencies should be held to account for their actions. Effective accountability procedures are essential if the police are to achieve their goals of lawfulness and legitimacy, as defined by The National Academy of Sciences.

Lawfulness refers to compliance with the formal requirements of the law, including statutes and court decisions.

Legitimacy refers to the perception that police conduct is both lawful and consistent with public expectations (National Research Council, 2004).

Lawfulness and legitimacy, in turn, are essential if the police are to achieve their goals of reducing crime and disorder, enhancing the quality of neighborhood life, and serving community needs. A lack of legitimacy inhibits the development of working partnerships that are an essential ingredient in community policing and problem-oriented policing (Goldstein, 1990, Scott, 2000)...

This paper is limited to policies and procedures related to holding individual officers accountable for their conduct. As already noted, agency-level accountability is not covered in this paper. The paper focuses on a selected set of accountability procedures. They include:

- (1) Formal agency policies on the use of police authority;*
- (2) Routine supervision of officers by first-line supervisors;*
- (3) Regular performance evaluations;*
- (4) Early intervention systems designed to identify performance problems;*
- (5) Procedures for investigating allegations of officer misconduct."*
